

DECADES OLD COLD CASE PROFILED IN KEW MEDIA GROUP'S "UNMASKING A KILLER" SOLVED

Title Goes Global with Sale to Sky UK

Toronto - May 4, 2018 *The infamous "Golden State Killer" profiled in KEW DISTRIBUTION's ("KEW MEDIA", "KEW" or the "Company") (TSX:KEW and KEW.WT) true crime show Unmasking A Killer (5 x 60) was identified, arrested and charged last week after a decades-long investigation that had mystified detectives, journalists, and the community. 72-year-old Joseph James DeAngelo, a former police officer, has been identified as responsible for a string of 12 murders and 51 attacks in Southern California in the 1970s and 80s.*

Unmasking A Killer takes an in-depth look at the manhunt, alongside patterns, escape methods and mind games of the "Golden State Killer." Interviews with investigators, law enforcement and victims, who have never spoken out publicly, offer information to help solve the mystery of a man who had, until now, managed to successfully fly under the radar for decades.

KEW recently sold Unmasking A Killer to UK pay-TV channel Sky in the UK after the show originally aired on HLN, a CNN Worldwide network in U.S. Jonathan Ford, Executive Vice President of Sales, Distribution at KEW said bidding in the UK for the series was "very competitive" and Sky was "quick to take the show off the market". "We're experiencing similar levels of interest in other key territories and have several other deals at contract stage. We've certainly seen a surge in enquiries since the arrest, the timing has been quite astonishing since the hunt for the killer has been in progress for 44 years," he adds.

Golden State Killer: Unmasked premieres on SKY Living in the UK today, May 4th.
